Infant Sorrow

This text belongs to a sequence of poems, written five years after Songs of Innocence, which deals with things unknown or only hinted at in the previous collection. Here the poet introduces the world of experience and the sickly consciousness of it. When they are read together, the two collections represent the world as it is envisioned by what Blake calls 'two contrary states of the human soul'.

William Blake
Songs of Experience
(1794)

My mother groaned! My father wept,
Into the dangerous world I leapt,
Helpless, naked, piping loud,
Like a fiend hid in a cloud.

5 Struggling in my father's hands,
Striving against my swaddling bands,
Bound and weary, I thought best
To sulk upon my mother's breast.
