

The Knight

In the 'General Prologue' to The Canterbury Tales Chaucer provides descriptions of some of the pilgrims. The texts are given in a modern English version, since Chaucer's language is quite difficult to understand for contemporary readers of English. The text below presents the readers with the first pilgrim of the whole party.

Geoffrey Chaucer
The Canterbury Tales
(ca 1387-1400)
General Prologue

There was a Knight, a most distinguished man,
Who from the day on which he first began
To ride abroad<sup>1</sup> had followed chivalry,
Truth, honour, generousness and courtesy,
5 He had done nobly in his sovereign's war
And ridden into battle, no man more,
As well in Christian as in heathen<sup>2</sup> places,
And ever honoured for his noble graces.
When we took Alexandria<sup>3</sup>, he was there.
10 He often sat at table in the chair
Of honour, above all nations, when in Prussia.
In Lithuania he had ridden, and Russia,
No Christian man so often, of his rank<sup>4</sup>.
When, in Granada, Algeciras<sup>5</sup> sank
15 Under assault, he had been there, and in
North Africa, raiding Benamarin<sup>6</sup>,
In Anatolia he had been as well
And fought when Ayas<sup>7</sup> and Attalia<sup>8</sup> fell,
For all along the Mediterranean coast
20 He had embarked with many a noble host<sup>9</sup>.
In fifteen mortal battles he had been
And jousted<sup>10</sup> for our faith at Tramissene<sup>11</sup>
Thrice in the lists<sup>12</sup>, and always killed his man.
This same distinguished knight had led the van<sup>13</sup>
25 Once with the Bey of Balat<sup>14</sup>, doing work
For him against another heathen Turk;
He was of sovereign value in all eyes.
And though so much distinguished, he was wise
And in his bearing<sup>15</sup> modest as a maid.
30 He never yet a boorish<sup>16</sup> thing had said
In all his life to any, come what might;
He was a true a perfect gentle-knight.
Speaking of his equipment, he possessed
Fine horses, but he was not gaily dressed.
35 He wore a fustian<sup>17</sup> tunic stained<sup>18</sup> and dark
With smudges<sup>19</sup> where his armour had left mark;
Just home from service, he had joined our ranks
To do his pilgrimage and render thanks.
