T3 The Knight

In the 'General Prologue' to The Canterbury Tales Chaucer provides descriptions of some of the pilgrims. The texts are given in a modern English version, since Chaucer's language is quite difficult to understand for contemporary readers of English. The text below presents the readers with the first pilgrim of the whole party.

There was a Knight, a most distinguished man, Who from the day on which he first began To ride abroad¹ had followed chivalry, Truth, honour, generousness and courtesy,

- He had done nobly in his sovereign's war And ridden into battle, no man more, As well in Christian as in heathen² places, And ever honoured for his noble graces.
 When we took Alexandria³, he was there.
- He often sat at table in the chair
 Of honour, above all nations, when in Prussia.
 In Lithuania he had ridden, and Russia,
 No Christian man so often, of his rank⁴.
 When, in Granada, Algeciras⁵ sank
- ¹⁵ Under assault, he had been there, and in North Africa, raiding Benamarin⁶, In Anatolia he had been as well And fought when Ayas⁷ and Attalia⁸ fell, For all along the Mediterranean coast
- He had embarked with many a noble host⁹.
 In fifteen mortal battles he had been
 And jousted¹⁰ for our faith at Tramissene¹¹
 Thrice in the lists¹², and always killed his man.
 This same distinguished knight had led the van¹³
- Once with the Bey of Balat¹⁴, doing work
 For him against another heathen Turk;
 He was of sovereign value in all eyes.
 And though so much distinguished, he was wise
 And in his bearing¹⁵ modest as a maid.
- 30 He never yet a boorish¹⁶ thing had said In all his life to any, come what might; He was a true a perfect gentle-knight. Speaking of his equipment, he possessed Fine horses, but he was not gaily dressed.
- He wore a fustian¹⁷ tunic stained¹⁸ and dark With smudges¹⁹ where his armour had left mark; Just home from service, he had joined our ranks To do his pilgrimage and render thanks.
